HILLSBOROUGH, N. C., WEDNESDAY, MARCH 18, 1868.

[From the New York Observer.]

THAT'S THE PLACE.

There was a queer old gentleman at the Academy on examination day. The trustees seemed to think a great deal of him, and treated him with much respect; but the boys felt rather uneasy, as his sharp, gray eyes looked searchingly at each one of them, and they saw that he was listening carefully to their answers. "I do wonder who that old chap is!" exclaimed Charley Vane after the exercises were over, and they were preparing to go home. "I declare, he frightened me so, I don't think I could have told the points of the compass, if he had asked me!" Harry Brown laughed. He did not look frightened; he had done his part well that day, and many admiring glances had rested on the boy who was called the best scholar. The strange old gentleman was standing with one of the school officers, in the play-ground, as Harry passed out with several other boys.

"Harry," said Mr. Raymond, stopping him, "I think this gentleman has left his cane in the hall up stairs, will you look for it?" "Certainly, sir," and Harry went quickly up to the school-room again, and returning with the cane, presented it to the gentleman, with a polite bow.

"That's a fine boy," remarked Mr. Raymond, as Harry passed on toward the gate; "he is one of the boys we are proud of." The old gentleman was following Harry closely with those stern gray eyes. Just as the boy reached the gate, a young girl from the female department of the school was going out; and, trying to open it, dropped one of her books. The other boys paid no attention; but Harry stepped forward, held open the gate, and picked up the book, handing it to her with a pleasant remark. At that moment a carriage, containing several ladies, drove up. As they looked at Harry, he recognized them, and raised his cap from his head, with a graceful bow.

The old gentleman saw it all; but when Mr. Raymond said, in a pleasant way, "How few boys have such good manners!" he only replied, "It is all very well; but let me see that boy at home; that's the place! Let me see him with his mother and sisters, and then I can judge of his good manners. If you want to know a boy's true character, see him in his home; that's the place!" The old gentleman brought down his cane with emphasis at these last words; and Mr. Raymond seemed rather disappointed that he did not appreciate more the "model boy" of their school.

But I think the old gentleman was right when he said, "that's the place." Suppose we look into Harry Brown's home, and see how he appeared there that same evening.

Harry went into the room where his mother and sisters sat at their sewing. He threw his cap carelessly down upon the table; he did not even say good afternoon, as he took it off. "Perhaps he forgot it, or else he did not think it worth while—only his mother and sisters, you know. Well, Harry, did your examination pass off successfully?"

"Oh, yes, first-rate!" Harry might have told the particulars of the examination, to interest his mother and sisters, as they had been unable to attend it; but he did not seem to think it necessary. He began to look around for a seat. Somehow the ladies' work had become scattered about on the different chairs, and it offended Harry's feelings.

"For pity's sake, can't you give a fellow a chair to sit on!"

Sister Ellen began to move her work. "Here is one," she said; and, as Harry took it, a spool of cotton fell and rolled away. He did not pick it up; but sat down, and opened one of his books. Surely, that did not seem like the boy who had so politely held open the gate and picked up the book for a young miss, half an hour before! But it was only Harry's sister this time, and perhaps he thought it foolish to be polite to her. When Harry's father came in, and asked him to look in the library for a magazine which had been left there, Harry did not do it with that "certainly, sir," and that bright look which so pleased Mr. Raymond in the afternoon, and which would have pleased his father still more and helped to make home happy.

At the tea-table Harry did not think of those little acts of politeness which he would not have forgotten had he been talking tea with Mr. Raymond or the strange old gentleman, instead of only at home. He helped himself to bread, without noticing that his sister, by his side had none. He said, "Here, take it!" when Ellen did not see that he was holding the butter-plate towards her. And he neglected the little "thank you," and the "please," which are such necessary parts of politeness at all times. Then, when Harry went to bed, he did not think it worth while to say goodnight: though he had been very careful to say a polite "good afternoon" before leaving school that day. I trust, Harry's good manners were kept for those outside of his own home. And that strange old gentleman knew how many boys had this fault. So, in a few years, when he wanted a book-keeper for his counting house, from among the graduates at the Academy, he would not select one, until he had visited several at their homes and become acquainted with their manners there. Then—to the surprise of all the school—he did not choose Harry Brown. "For," said he, "I don't want any boy about me who can't be polite to his mother and sister!"

Boys, how many of you are like Harry? Some of you are, I know. Then bear in mind the words of the strange old gentleman: "Let me see that boy at home; that's the place!"

Do not think that home is the place where you can throw off all politeness, and be as careless and rough as you please. If there is a place on earth where you should wear your good manners and be polite and kind—that's the place? If there are any persons to whom you should give your most polite words and kind attentions, those persons are your father, mother and sister. Will you give more attention and respect to those outside, than to the dear ones at home? Will you be praised for good manners by strangers, and cause those at home to think you rude and thoughtless? It will make your home much more happy and pleasant, if you would wear your best manners always there. Do not omit any act of politeness there, which you would perform elsewhere. Do not be ashamed to be polite at home: that is the best place in all the world to you; that is the place where your true character will appear; therefore, remember to cultivate politeness at home.

AUNT LINA'S SUNSHINE.

"And what is your name?" said I, as the child of the friend whom I had just come to visit, passed before me.

"I'm Aunt Lina's Sunshine," was the pleasant answer of Louisa.

"That is a queer name," I said, "Why do they call you so?"

Shaking back her long ringlets, and looking up to me with her earnest, speaking eyes, she said:

"Aunt Lina is papa's sister; she is blind and cannot see anything, not the pretty flowers, nor the soft, white clouds, nor the little birds. She hears the birds sing though, but she cannot see the pretty colors. She feels the warm sunshine, too, but she can't see how beautiful it makes the meadows look after the rain. But sometimes when she is sad and lonely she calls me to her, and I sit on my little stool by her side, and say the pretty verses to her that I learn in the Sabbath School; and I have learned some hymns, too, and I repeat those to her, and then she calls me her sunshine. Don't you think it's very nice to be Aunt Lina's Sunshine?"

"Yes, indeed I do. You are a real little missionary," I said.

"No, I'm not a missionary. I know who the missionaries are. They are people who go a great way off to the poor heathen that don't know anything about Jesus, and tell them about him. What made you say that I was a missionary?"

"Because missionaries do good, and you do good to Aunt Lina, don't you?"

"I don't tell her about Jesus, because she knows all about him, and tells me about him;" and the child stopped, and thought a moment, and then looked up and added, "No, I am not a missionary; I'm only Aunt Lina's Sunshine."

AT A TURNING-POINT.

As Thomas Bent was walking along the street one day, he saw a gentleman drop a purse upon the walk. Thomas quickly picked it up, slipped it very slyly into his pocket, and walked on saying to himself, "I'm a lucky fellow! This purse feels as if there was a good lot of money in it. Harrah for Tom Bent!"

Just then the boy's conscience woke up and whispered, "What are you going to do with that purse? It is not yours. If you keep it you will be a thief. Remember the eighth commandment, 'Thou shalt not steal.'"

Thomas paused a moment to think. Then with flashing eyes he ran after the gentleman, and handing him the purse said: "If you please, sir, you dropped your purse. Here it is."

"You are an honest boy," said the man, as he took the purse, and smiling pleasantly, handed him five shillings.

Thomas walked home, feeling happy indeed, as he had good reason to do. He had escaped a great danger. When he picked up that purse he was standing at a point where two roads met—one was the path of the thief, the other of the honest man. If he had kept the purse he would have entered the first path, and most likely have landed at last in a prison; by restoring it he entered the way of honesty and right. So you see, he was at a turning point in his life, and he turned it wisely. Happy Thomas Bent!

Children, you now see what a turning-point is. Whenever you are met by a strong temptation to do a wrong act, you are at a turning-point. Let the temptation conquer you, and you will find yourselves in the wrong road. Conquer the temptation, and your feet will stand in the right way. Look out for turning-points.

THE HABIT OF READING.

The young should always cultivate a habit of reading, for it may be to them, not only the means of information, but the source of many of the finest enjoyments of life. They who make good books their constant companions, will never want good and faithful friends in their prosperous days, or their seasons of reverse. There can be no blank in the lives of those persons, who, from active love, hold daily fellowship with the wisest and best of their race. We think we could hardly be tempted to exchange our habit of reading for any other friend it may be our fortune to find upon earth. And we are sure that any who will make this habit a friend, will ever esteem it among the wisest steps of their lives; and so we counsel the young, from our own experience, among all their getting in this world, to get the habit, the love of reading—and always to have a good book with which to fill up every leisure hour. In this way they may come to know that the gems of life are found in its waste places.

Band of Hope Review.

THE TERRIFYING SUNSHINE.—Nothing but the truth of God's word can give comfort and true peace, either living or dying. Whilst living, if men are not resting on the word, they can at least have no rest in denying it. The very fear lest the Bible be true is enough to mar all enjoyment. A celebrated infidel said one day to a friend of his who had imbibed the same principles: "There is one thing that mars all the pleasures of my life."

"Indeed!" replied his friend. "What is that?"

"I am afraid the Bible is true! If I could know certainly that death is an eternal sleep, I should be happy; my joy would be complete! But here is the thorn that stings me. This is the sword that pierces my very soul: If the Bible is true, I am lost forever!"

DESTRUCTION OF THE EARTH BY FIRE.

According to the testimony of Professor R. D. Hitchcock, in the July number of the Bibliotheca Sacra, natural philosophers have little cause to sneer at Peter's prophecy, that "the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat; the earth also, and the works that are therein, shall be burned up." In an article on "The Relations of Geology to Theology," he says, "The earth contains within itself the agencies necessary to its desolation by fire. Its crust is supposed to be several miles thick, while the interior is in a state of fusion, like lava. The three hundred active volcanoes on the crust are the breathing holes of the internal fire. At present counteracting agencies prevent this lava from bursting forth. But let the order be issued for its liberation, and these vents will all belch forth fire and desolation. The works of man, in which we take so much pride, may be crumbled in a moment by the concussion of the crust. Liberated gases may combine explosively with the oxygen in the air, so that the heavens should pass away with a great noise." He mentions in confirmation of the above statements the well known fact of certain stars suddenly becoming very brilliant, and then gradually fading to their former dimness. Not longer ago than May of last year a remarkable case of this kind occurred. A star of the eighth magnitude, in the constellation called the Northern Crown, all at once blazed out into a star of the second magnitude, and in twelve days declined again to its original rank. From a careful observation conducted by experienced astronomers, indications were obtained that this star had been suddenly "enveloped in the flames of burning hydrogen. In consequence of some convulsion, it may be, enormous quantities of gas were set free. A large part of this gas consisted of hydrogen, which was burning about the star in combination with some other element. As the free hydrogen became exhausted, the flames gradually abated, and the star waned down to its former brightness. It seems, then, that there are known instances of worlds wrapped in flames. They ignite, burn fiercely, fade, and disappear. Suppose, now, that for any reason a combustible gas should be evolved upon our planet; there it might combine explosively with the oxygen of the atmosphere, or burn like the star in the Northern Crown. Either case would meet the conditions of the prophecy. We think, therefore, that the words of Peter are amply illustrated by the latest discoveries of astronomy."

The Professor remarks, moreover, that "the fact that the purification of the present world can render it a beautiful habitation, fit for the residence of princes, renders probable the belief of many divines, that the redeemed will dwell upon this earth after the day of judgment."

SACRIFICE OF LIFE IN CHINA.—A correspondent of the San Francisco Bulletin speaks of the terrible carnage of the late Taiping rebellion. One district is described which yielded 90,000 chests of tea per annum before the war, and is now a desert waste. A belt of land 400 miles long by 200 wide is literally without an inhabitant. The writer says:

"The distinguished China traveller and savant Macgowan estimates the loss of life by the Taiping war at about 25,000,000 souls; but intelligent Chinese I have conversed with say that full 100,000,000 were killed, or perished from starvation. There was not much to choose on either side. Whether Imperial or Taiping, the victorious party put men, women and children to the sword. The Grand Canal used to be choked up with dead bodies, and I have seen even the swift flowing Yangtze crimson with the blood of all ages, sexes, and conditions of life."

Thomas S. McCreery of Davies Co., Ky., a Democrat, was elected a United States Senator by the Legislature of Kentucky, on the 18th inst. Mr. McCreery got 110 votes, the whole number cast being 124.

Advertisers will find this paper one of the best advertising mediums in the up Country, and if the business men in Danville, Richmond, Petersburg, Norfolk, Baltimore and N. York city, want the use of Printer's Ink that will pay, let them

ADVERTISE IN THE MILTON CHRONICLE.

I want 1000 subscribers for a start. Caswell, farmed for her yellow leaf tobacco, her intelligence, wealth and pretty girls, will furnish five hundred of this number, and Person, no less famed, will roll up 300.
Halifax, Va., Greenville, Orange, Alamance, and Rockingham, N. C., will more than make up the balance—and Old Pittsylvania will "run the measure over." Forward your names, friends and let all who wish to advertise send along their advertisements.

A Letter from "JESSE HOLMES, The Fool Killer," will be published monthly.

Address me at Milton, N. C.

C. N. B. EVANS.

Brethren of the press will very much oblige me by looking.

Ho! for the Oyster Season!—1867

THE subscriber would respectfully inform his former patrons and the public generally, that he has made complete arrangements to receive both Fresh and Pickled OYSTERS regularly, from the best Oyster houses in Norfolk, and guarantees that the Oysters from this establishment, both fresh and pickled, will not be excelled by any that can be brought to this market.

He has also fitted up his cutting room expressly for cooking up oysters in all the best styles, and he flatters himself that, after twenty years experience, he will be able to give general satisfaction to all who may be disposed to patronize his house. Oysters can be had at all times, both night and day. He returns his sincere thanks to his friends for their liberal patronage last season, and trusts that he may merit a continuance of their patronage for the season of 1867.

Families will be supplied on the most liberal terms.
